Documation Promotes Document Management at Cimtech's 'Future of Electronic Information and Records Management in the Public Sector' Event

Eastleigh, Hampshire UK, 30th April 2010 – Document management software supplier, Documation, will be focusing on the cost benefits and efficiency gains the public sector can receive from document management at Cimtech's Future of Electronic Information and Records Management in the Public Sector event.

The exhibition is being held on the 7th July 2010 at the Fielder Center, University of Hertfordshire. The event will host delegates from local authorities, government departments, agencies, health trusts, police services, further and higher education and all other public authorities.

Steve Pittway, Commercial Manager at Documation explains the importance of this event: "The management of information and records is more crucial in the public sector than the private sector as governments are directly accountable to the members of the public. A strategic approach to records management is vital to facilitate recordkeeping and retrieval. Documation have been working with public sector bodies over the last two decades to help them manage their paper – automating processes and ensuring compliance is met."

Documation can be found at stand 16 and will be exhibiting from 9am-6pm, showcasing a range of document management solutions including their award winning Invoice Management Solution \(IMS\), procurement solution, archive & retrieval solution and their digital mailroom solution. The event features workshops and keynote speeches focusing on new and forthcoming best practice guidelines and standards.
